LET'S GO GUAM: Residents back team's plan for better jobs

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

May 31, 2026

Supporters and undecided voters are endorsing the vision of Josh Tenorio and Tina Muña-Barnes to increase the number of good-paying jobs and further bolster Guam's private sector as ways to make Guam a more affordable place to raise children and cement your career. The gubernatorial ticket continued to lay out their plans for a prosperous island during their latest meet and greet event held Sunday night in Tamuning — the heart of the community's retail and tourism industries.

Lieutenant Governor Tenorio knows a thriving private sector is essential to a well-funded government, because more investments for critical services in education, health care, and law enforcement are realized when businesses and employees do well.

"This is the lifeline of the island, the economic center of the island. So many businesses are here. And that means so many people come here to work. That's why we have pressed to cut the red tape, and finish important road projects for everyone who comes through here. Tina and I will be innovative to leverage more federal investments that bring our power underground, build a new hospital, and train our people for good jobs," Tenorio said. "There's a lot of division on this island, but the best leaders fight for those who need their support the most. And they are willing to work with anyone to get those results."

"We are the team who will continue to give our hearts to you, be with you, and stay with you. My grandson was in the foster system, and I'm proud of my son and daughter-in-law for welcoming him into our family. That value of poksai was passed down from my parents to me and my siblings and now to our kids. This is just one example of the love that spreads when we practice the wisdom of our elders," Muña-Barnes said. "Josh and I will instill the best of our culture into our government, so we help families reach their dreams."

Dr. Ellen Bez, a longtime physician who practiced in Tamuning for nearly 30 years, stressed to the crowd the need for the community to come together behind the best candidates for Guam.

"The 2018 campaign is when I first met Josh. Hearing how he spoke to people, I got a good sense of his character. He always speaks with kindness. He always listens with compassion. I was really impressed with his demeanor," Dr. Bez said. "To me, this Lt. Governor has proven to be a hardworking person with good character. When challenging situations arose, he handled it with composure. He stood proud with grace. He's the kind of guy you can trust and depend on. That's the person I want to vote for, who I want to be my Governor. I want to stand tall with him."
